Stitch N' Pitch was SO much fun - it was truly amazing to see so many knitters in one place! As i walked down the aisle to my seat i couldn't help smiling from ear to ear - it was just awesome seeing everyone in their seats KNITTING and chatting and checking out the goodie bags (which, by the way, were really nice, too - thanks to everyone who gave us yarn, coupons, patterns, etc.) and meeting so many wonderful SnBer's from all over L.A., the O.C. and in our online community.

The seats were good and it was a great game, too, the Dodgers winning on the last at-bat (my thoughts - "the game's not over yet, let me finish this row...") and i can honestly say a splendid time was had by all (can't WAIT to use those coupons, i'm a dangerous woman). 560 tickets sold - and that's with very, very, little advertising/NO mention on the Dodgers website. Still, Stitch N' Pitch was a big hit and next year's will be even better!

And a final note - i heard a couple of shock-jock radio types chided the event, saying that going to baseball games are a "guy" thing and should stay that way (and something about not wanting to see a doily on home plate). He obviously has no idea how many pro athletes' moms get through years of Little League, Pop Warner and the like with a knit bag full of UFO's at their side...

Knit on, and let's do it all again!
